COLUMBIA DEFEAT RATED REAL UPSET

Thorp Springs Surprise by Leading Violet to Win Over Alma Mater.

BLOCKED KICKS DECIDE

Berkowitz Stops Punt for Touchdown—Balks Blue's Try at Goal.

By JOHN J. HALL.

Eighteen years ago a barrel chested athlete dragged his weary bulk to a consoling shower. His face was a muddled smear and the bulging muscles of his broad back ached. But he smiled—he smiled because Columbia had won and he had had a heavy hand in the winning. The same stalwart smiled again yesterday as he left Columbia's field of play. He wasn't smiling in the joy of a Columbia victory. Columbia had lost.

Paradoxical? Maybe. Still he smiled and he didn't drag himself off. Instead he was virtually dragged off because the Violet of New York University had just triumphed over the Light Blue and White of Columbia 7 to 6 in the outstanding upset of the Eastern football season, and all University Heights want the astigmatized universe to know that the splendid coaching of Tom Thorp, Columbia '05, had not gone unappreciated.

It was the seventh meeting between these local universities since football was revived at Columbia in 1915. Since then there have been defeats and victories for both, yet none that carried such a jar as this Columbia sitting stunned with amazement at their third and beaten athletes tramped from South Field yesterday afternoon, no such unexpected result as sent N. Y. U. men plunging head over heels into a whirlwind of jubilation. Columbia had made no preparations for this game. What work the men of Buck O'Neill had done during the last week was all in pointing for the bigger games ahead—Cornell, for instance, and the Yale game, so generally accepted as a sure winner were game time such fabulous odds as 20 to 1 were ignored by the Violet, and Buck O'Neill himself went tramping off to Ithaca to see Cornell play instead of sending out a scout.

Columbia was all wrong. Columbia had visualized another Hamlet without Hamlet—a team coached by Tom Thorp without that team absorbing some of the fighting spirit of one of the best football players and one of the greatest coaches in the East. Thorp, however, was not a man to be whipped. He had told his men that they could win if they fought, and they believed him and fought to the finish.

Game's Thriller in Spots.

As a game it was a thriller in spots. It was a thriller when N. Y. U. blocked a kick in the first quarter and scored its touchdown. It was a thriller when the Violet was twice more within striking distance of Columbia's goal. It thrilled when Roderick and Koppich went completely wild in the first quarter to score Columbia's touchdown. It was more than a thriller when big Berkowitz plunged through to block the kick from touchdown which would have given the Mounties a lead. It was an even break for the afternoon, if indeed there could have been any equal share of honor for Columbia in a drawn contest yesterday.

Almost from the start of the game the Violet was knocking at Columbia's door demanding her score. Weathered, kicking off, had booted clear to the goal line, where Koppich had caught the ball and cantered out thirty yards before he was downed. Right there it looked as if the expected Columbia parade had started. Here Thorp, the great coach, had called for a half back to take the ball and march on the field. It swung along to halt under the north goal posts which had been wound with Ohio State colors. The Michigan hand followed and took its stand under the south goal where the uprisings had been made to resemble barber poles of maize and blue.

There must have been 75,000 spectators in the stands, when an hour and a half before game time, the Ohio State band marched on the field. It swung along to halt under the north goal posts which had been wound with Ohio State colors. The Michigan hand followed and took its stand under the south goal where the uprisings had been made to resemble barber poles of maize and blue.

This was the biggest affair of its kind ever held in the part of the country and the ceremonies were meant to be impressive and grand. Two wooden stands had been erected here but they were small. Chairs and benches had been placed on the side lines below the boxes.

Tickets $50 Each.

At this time every seat in the huge enclosure was filled, tickets having yielded speculators as much as $50 apiece. The space at the open end of the stadium was crowded with persons standing. Two wooden stands had been erected here but they were small. Chairs and benches had been placed on the side lines below the boxes.

It was ruled a touchdown, and Weathered added an additional point with a boot from placement.

Columbia chose to receive. Weathered kicked off. Again Koppich took it and again he brought it back a respectable distance before being downed. "I've

LOSERS ARE OUTPLAYED

Success of Wolverines Marred by Injuries of Roby, Vandervoort and Goebel.

By WALTER TRUMBULL.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 21.—Before a crowd of 72,000 persons here to-day the Michigan football team defeated the eleven of Ohio State by a score of 19 to 0. Michigan made two touchdowns, from one of which a goal was kicked, and scored on a place kick and a drop kick from the field.

It may truly be said that Yost's Wolverines got the breaks. Roby, one of their best backs, is nursing a broken arm to-night and Vandervoort, their regular right tackle, has a broken leg. The injuries came in the first half of the game and both men will be out for the remainder of the season, as Capt. Goebel also retired from the fray with a slightly sprained ankle, it may be seen that the Michigan victory was clearly won.

The greatest crowd which has ever seen a football game in this country outside of the Yale bowl was gathered here to open Ohio State's new stadium. At least the opening was advertised for Ohio State, but Kipke, the little Michigan halfback, appeared to think that the celebration was in his honor and that somebody was opening something especially for his benefit. His teammates did their best to further this idea in his mind, making not one, but many openings through which he dashed and jumped and scored for substantial gains. When there was no opening he merely ran around and threw the various players who were fiercely endeavoring to attack him.

Starts in Second Period.

It was in the second period that Kipke really started to make himself obnoxious to all inhabitants of the Buckeye State who had come out expecting a pleasant afternoon entertainment. Previously Goebel had scored three points for Michigan with a place kick from the 20-yard line in the first quarter, but that was an advantage which might have been easily overcome. Kipke, on a double pass, dodged his way around Ohio's right end for twenty-five yards and a touchdown. When Goebel kicked the goal, Michigan's lead was 7 to 0. In the third period, he intercepted a forward pass and he zigzagged his way down the field for another touchdown. This time Goebel missed the goal. It may have been this which induced Kipke to try a little kicking himself. At any rate he kept on kicking and he scored a goal from the fourth period drop kick, a goal from the 35-yard line, thus completing a thoroughly satisfactory afternoon.

Just to Visualize.

If you wish to visualize the stadium, imagine that some giants stood at a half before game time. The Ohio State band marched on the field. It swung along to halt under the north goal posts which had been wound with Ohio State colors. The Michigan hand followed and took its stand under the south goal where the uprisings had been made to resemble barber poles of maize and blue.

Another Costly Mistake.

Shortly before the end of the first period came a similar blunder to add to the supporters of the Maroon. This time it was Tom Myers, easily Fordham's star of the day, who made a dash for right end before he had the ball securely in his arms, only to find the place kicking goal posts. A punt out of Ganger seemed the logical play, but instead Fordham called for an end run, and Myers in his over-anxiety failed to clutch the ball securely.

Fordham's cup of bitter disappointment was filled to the brim on the first play in the second period when McDonough, who had just relieved Woodard, fumbled the ball.

FORDHAM FUMBLES HELP GEORGETOWN

Give Visitors Early Lead and 28 to 13 Victory at Polo Grounds.

By SAMUEL J. BROOKMAN.

Fumbling, that old football bugaboo, cost Fordham whatever chance the Maroon may have had of defeating Georgetown in their annual gridiron clash at the Polo Grounds yesterday. Three times in a loosely played first half the visiting collegians turned fumbles into easy touchdowns, gaining a lead that Fordham for all of its plucky uphill fight, could not overhaul. The score stood 28 to 13 in favor of a strong, but apparently overrated Georgetown eleven when the game ended almost at twilight.
